Farmingville, NY - Brookhaven Supervisor Ed Romaine was recently a guest speaker at the Longwood School District Legislative Committee. The committee, comprised of educators, administrators, student and parents, meets monthly at the Longwood High School Library with elected officials to discuss issues affecting the community.

"The involvement of citizens in local government is an essential part of democracy, and the foundation of the principles our nation was built upon," said Supervisor Romaine. "This was a wonderful opportunity to speak with the students and stakeholders in the Longwood community about their concerns, and update them on the projects and programs that the Town of Brookhaven is working on in their area."
